A FAIR EXCHANGE.

Old Al has an ancient auto which jounces and bounces hither and yon and acts only as old cars do. He happens to see a farm which is offered for what have you. Al trades his car for the farm, and Shorty Si drives off with the auto.

The farm proves to be no bit better than the car. The house falls apart, the cows use crutches and the rest of the live stock is mean mannered.

Meanwhile Shorty Si is having all kinds of trouble with the car. A mule kicks Al away from the farm into the scene where Si is trying to fix the auto. An explosion, and as the smoke clears, Al and Si are shaking hands.

AESOP SAYS:-

" IF YOU THINK THE AUTOMOBILE HAS FOUND ITS PLACE, TRY TO PARK ONE. "
